Nicholas (Mechanic)

I am so relieved to have an understanding of the strengths and weaknesses of my dyslexia. I was getting frustrated trying to make sense of long and complicated manufacturing procedures. My employer was impatient with my mistakes. I was becoming fed up as I knew I was good at my job. With help from Human Resources and a dyslexia specialist, my boss and I now understand my strengths and weaknesses. My boss has ensured all the procedures are clear and concise. My performance review has improved remarkably and I have just been given the responsibility of mentoring an apprentice. What a change!

Lisa (Student)

I always worked so hard at school but no matter how much I knew, I always obtained a poor score for my essays. I nearly decided to give up. But with support from a dyslexia specialist I now understand how to structure an essay. I have also developed effective study skills in line with my leaning style and above all my grades have shot up. Now I am in my second year of university and I am on course for a 2:1.

Mohammed (Architect)

When I worked for a marketing firm my work constantly had to be checked for mistakes, no matter how hard I tried. This caused me to feel unappreciated and my team would become impatient with me. As a result, I decided to leave my job. By coincidence, I was watching a TV program on dyslexia and started to realise that I could be dyslexic. I went to see a dyslexia specialist and found that I was. Consequently, with the support of my dyslexia specialist, we looked at careers that cater to my strengths. It is amazing, I am now training to become an Architect and I am loving it. I do realise I will always have dyslexia but I never realised how my creative and visual strengths has given me a huge advantage in my chosen field.
